THE EVENING STAR bas a regular and times larger than that of any other pape in the city. As a local NEWS paper and Advertising Medium it has no competitor.

In the sudden death of Senator Plumb the republic loses one of its most energetic and useful sons. He was perhaps the most popular as he was at the time of his decease the most prominent man of his state in the public councils. A man who had risen from the humble walks of life by force of brain and indomitable energy he had for many years impressed himself on nationa affairs. Full of zeal, his labors lay in many fields and he literally wore out his powers in unintermitted exercise. Under the conditions of public life and his own indefatigable natur there was no other end possible. Mr. Plum! was a man of the people and he died in their service, refusing to stop yet knowing that if he did not life itself would suddenly "Moderation in all things" is the apostolic injunction. But who shall say that Webster's thrice-repeated formula of "Action" is not the whole philosophy of life, and who will not agree that it is better to fall doing too much than fade into oblivion as a do-nothing? The late Senator from Kansas was the most tireless worker perhaps in the Senate. Not only will be be remembered for what he did for Kansas and the republic, but there will be a lively recollection of him as one of the foremost law givers of the District of Columbia. His services on the appropriations committee, and especially as chairman on the subcommittee having jurisdiction of the District appriations, were important and extended. In the local field he objected to some things that were good because they did not commend themselves to his judgment or his prejudices, and his prejudices were as strong as his character. But he approved of all the more notable legislation suggested for the District's welfare and it was on minor matters that he vented personal dislikes, and turned to the public the rough side of his nature. His knowledge of District finance was extensive, no man's more so, and his attention to all District concerns close and his information exact. The great workers of Congress, like Randall, Beck, Burns and Plumb are, one by one, passing away.

The democratic party in the House of Representatives is apparently no more united than it was during the heat of the speakership contest. The friends of the Speaker and the followers of his principal rival are seemingly arrayed against each other in bitter animosity, and the Speaker has not, to all appearances, lessened the breach by his action in tendering assignments to Mr. Mills. Whether the feeling will continue or the inflammation become assuaged will depend on "the subsequent proceedings." The announcement of the committees on Wednesday may or may not throw oil on the troubled waters. From present indications it is not likely that the friends of Mr. Mills will be altogether pleased with the result, although their dissatisfaction may not extend so far as some persons appear to think probable. Faction is almost as much a part of political human nature as partisanism. The factions of a party are indeed little parties working or trying to work their will within the party. In the present instance the germs of future policy may be found in the aftermath of the organization of the Fifty-second Congress.

Santa Claus, in his letter printed in Saturday's STAR, said concerning the poorer children of the city who had written to him pathetic letters: "May God grant that some one may hear of these children before I reach Washington and do something to lift the sadness of their lives for a few hours." A correspondent, whose communication is printed in another column, responds to this indirect appeal. correspondent and others with the same beneficent inclinations into communication with Santa Claus, that they may assist in bringing Christmas joy to the needy. It will per haps be better in order to prevent duplication and omissions if the benevolent forward their substantial suggestions on this point to Santa Claus through THE STAR, that the work may be done by him systematically. THE STAR has already sent to Santa Claus on its own account a note (neatly engraved, pictured and colored), giving him a broad hint that in certain cases his letter might well be backed with something more substantial, and it will take pleasure in forwarding similar notes for others, that breathe the spirit of the Christmas season. Christmas is close at hand, and it is obvious that the readers of THE STAR who wish to respond effectively to this suggestion must

The London creditors of the state of Virginia have decided at last to accept the proposed terms of compromise and the probabilities are that the vexed matter of the Virginia debt will now be adjusted. The acceptance is a wise step on the part of the bondholders, and the amicable settlement proposed and accepted bids fair to rehabilitate the credit of the Old Dominion and increase its prosperity. The maintenance of a state's good faith is an important consideration-indeed, so vitally important that anything short of existence should be sacrificed to secure it The familiar anecdote related of Dr. Samuel Johnson would inculcate even this sacrifice. A man defended a certain compromise of principle in a conversation with the famous lexicographer and moralist on the ground that "a man must live." "No," replied the doctor, quickly. "A must be honest; he need not

As France going to be the prime mover in starting a European war over the eastern question? Her course in the Bulgarian affair giver color to an assumption of this sort, for who is there that thinks that the expulsion from Bulgaria of a newspaper man who was virtually acting as a Russian agent is sufficient ground for threatening demands? France as Russia's ally may be taking a hand in the Danubian

The change of disease dangers from the types of disease represented by yellow and typhoid fevers and by other forms of contagion or infection to pneumonia, influenza and its infections and aggravated form of grip is one of the most notable signs of the times. Just what it signifies cannot be correctly stated, at least not yet. The prevalence of colds and pneumonia suggests unusual care on the part of the people, especially of delicate or aged persons.

The pressure of Columbian exposition business is not so great that Chicago does not find time to attend to the customary duties of life. One judge had ten divorce cases to listen to in one day last week.

It would be desirable if the effort and money that have to be applied to arctic relief expedi tions could be applied to carefully fitting out an exploration enterprise that would not require

Congressman Turner has been compelled to cling to the traditions of trade far enough to enable him to turn the cold shoulder on some of the superabundant applicants for office.

Mr. Mills evidently doesn't intend to indulge in any active effort to make trouble in the present Congress, but he bids fair to make a firstclass trouble nucleus.

The state officials of New York are to give David B. Hill a farewell dinner. There should be many courses. It was a protracted farewell.

Mr. Rusk can greatly popularize himself with the coming juvenile voter by bombarding for a Christmas snow-storm.

With the New Year just at hand Kansas is expected to embrace the opportunity to swear off on the Farmers' Alliance.
